1. MODEL OVERVIEW & AUSTRALIAN MARKET NOTES

The Chrysler Sigma?later renamed Mitsubishi Sigma after Mitsubishi acquired Chrysler Australia in 1980?was the undisputed king of Australia's four-cylinder family car market across the late 1970s and 1980s. Manufactured at Tonsley Park in Adelaide, the Sigma (GE, GH, GJ, GK, GN) dethr oned traditional six-cylinder cars by offering expansive interior space, European-influenced st yling, four-wheel coil spring suspension, and revolutionary 'Silent Shaft' counter-rotating bal ance shafts in its Australian-cast Astron 1.85L, 2.0L, and 2.6L engines. The GH series introduc ed the legendary limited-edition Sigma Turbo in 1981 (Australia's first locally built turbochar ged production car), while the 1982 GJ series spawned the celebrated Peter Wherrett Special. Ov er 300,000 Sigmas were built in Adelaide before making way for the Magna.

The Sigma completely altered Australian buying habits, proving that a smooth, balance-shaft fou r-cylinder car could equal or exceed a traditional Australian straight-six in refinement and to wing capability. The Australian-built Sigma Wagon featured a unique Australian-engineered cargo floor and rear roofline not found on Japanese Galants, providing superior cargo volume.
