1. MODEL OVERVIEW & AUSTRALIAN MARKET NOTES

The Ford Falcon is one of the most storied names in Australian industrial and cultural history. Manufactured continuously at Broadmeadows, Victoria for 56 years (1960-2016) across seven distinct generations and over 3.5 million units, the Falcon fought an epic rivalry with the Holden Commodore. From the pioneering XK and the legendary XY GT-HO Phase III (the fastest 4-door production car in the world) to the Australian-designed XA hardtop, the bestselling XF, the indestructible Intech and Barra DOHC sixes, the high-revving Boss V8s, and the supercharged Sprint series, the Falcon embodied Australian engineering resilience and high performance.

Originally derived from the North American compact Falcon in 1960, the XK was comprehensively modified for Australia following ball-joint challenges, culminating in the 1965 XP Durability Run (70,000 miles at 70 mph at You Yangs). The 1967 XR created the Australian V8 muscle car era with the Falcon GT. The 1972 XA was the first Falcon entirely designed and engineered in Australia. In 1980, the XD/XE introduced alloy cylinder heads and Watts-linkage coil rear suspension. In 2002, the BA Falcon brought the revolutionary 4.0L DOHC 24V 'Barra' inline-six and Control Blade independent rear suspension, winning Wheels COTY. In 2008, the FG became the first Australian-built car to score a maximum 5-star ANCAP safety rating. On 7 October 2016, a blue FG X XR6 sedan became the final vehicle produced by Ford Australia.
